Unveiling the Post 2015 paradigm shift in Disaster Risk Management

The development agenda after 2015 will witness a paradigm shift with natural disasters and climate change becoming inseparable from the macro-economy. Mapping these changes was a galaxy of experts at the Disaster Preparedness Mitigation and Management (DPMM) field of study at AIT as part of a seminar series in March 2014. Speakers included Dr. Puji Pujiono, Chief - Disaster Risk Reduction, IDD - UNESCAP, Thailand; Mr. Arun Pinta of Department of Disaster Prevention and Mitigation, Thailand; Mr. Sanjeev Kafley of International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies; Mr. Krishna Krishnamurthy of World Food Programme; Dr. Ian Dacre of World Society for the Protection of Animals; Mrs. Gabrielle Iglesias of Asian Disaster Preparedness Center; and Mr. Godfred Paul of HelpAge.

‘Inclusive financing’ can bring stability and prosperity: Bangladesh Bank Governor Dr. Atiur Rahman

Bangladesh Bank Governor Dr. Atiur Rahman says inclusive financing and environmentally friendly ‘green’ banking is the answer to bringing financial stability to turbulent global markets.

The governor addressed an audience on 28 March 2014 at AIT on “Socially Responsible Financing for Enhancing Economic and Financial Stability—Glimpses from South Asia.” The lecture, held at the AIT School of Management, was organized by AIT Extension.

Citing the success story of his native Bangladesh – which has maintained GDP growth rates of 6% per annum since the global financial meltdown of 2007-2009 that crippled many world economies – the mercurial central banker said inclusive financing must be a new global priority to ward off the next round of potential financial crises.

Conference advances ‘Green Energy for Sustainable Development’ transition in Asia

International experts attending the ICUE 2014: Green Energy for Sustainable Development Conference organized on March 19-21 in Thailand by AIT considered a raft of options for moving the planet away from carbon-based fuels towards renewable energies. The three-day conference assessed social, technological, financial and investment aspects for achieving low-carbon growth, as well as national and regional energy development policies geared towards achieving sustainability for the planet. Led by Conference Director Dr. Shobhakar Dhakal of AIT, the conference included key speakers like Dr. Piyasvasti Amranand, Chairman, Energy for Environment Foundation; Prof. Arnulf Grübler of Yale University; and Dr. Shuzo Nishioka of Japan’s Institute for Global Environment.

‘Team AIT’ – Champs at FAO ‘International Day of Forests’ Debate Competition

A three-member team of students representing AIT recently took top prize at an inter-varsity policy debate competition organized by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) in Bangkok.

Marking “International Day of Forests” on 21 March 2014 at the FAO Regional Office for Asia and the Pacific, the competition was held under the theme “Forestry in a Changing World.” AIT’s international graduate students won top honors against the team from King Mongkut’s University of Technology by debating the proposition: “The best way to conserve forests is to keep people out of the forests.” The team included Cambodian doctoral student Sam Chanthy, fellow doctoral student Rehan Ul Haq of Pakistan, and Master’s student Aung Kyaw Naing from Myanmar. All three are students in the Natural Resources Management field of study at the AIT School of Environment, Resources and Development. Sam Chanthy was also awarded “Best Speaker” at the debate. The winners credited their AIT faculty mentors Dr. Rajendra Shreshta and Prof. Ganesh P Shivakoti for their success.

We Cannot Afford to Waste a Brain

The Atlantic carried an interview of Finland’s Minister of Education, Krista Kiuru. Talking about Finland’s phenomenal success in school education, the Minister remarked that Finland has created a school system based on equality. “Equal means that we support everyone and we’re not going to waste anyone’s skills. We don’t know what our kids will turn out like—we can’t know if one first-grader will become a famous composer, or another a famous scientist.”
