For scores of students arriving at the Asian Institute of Technology (AIT), the Welcome Show is their first ‘real’ taste of their campus life ahead. Internationality and diversity add to the pomp, pageantry and grandeur of this signature event which is quintessentially “AIT.”

On 19 September 2014, as the curtains rolled, teams from 14 countries displayed their talents and competed for honours. A highlight this year was student performances from Bangkok University and Thammasat University.

Eight hours of rigorous performances later, the results were announced with Nepal winning both the solo and group song competitions. Myanmar won the group dance, Thailand won the talent competition, while the team from Sri Lanka was the winner in drama. Mr. Antonio P. Jegillos Jr. of Philippines and Ms. Sharon Soe of Myanmar were crowned as Mr. and Ms. AIT respectively.

If you have been wondering about the sudden appearance of strategically placed cages in front of your favourite food haunts at AIT, then look no further. Two AIT students have been instrumental in championing a more efficient way of waste segregation.

Their initiative is one segment of a larger project “Greening AIT Campus Initiative” led by Prof. C Visvanathan, Interim Dean, School of Environment, Resources and Development (SERD).
